

Should white custom cabinets be fitted with baseboards

Overview

Depending on your preference, your kitchen cabinet color can match the baseboards, but it does not have to do so. Quarter round, also known as shoe or toe molding, is a decorative molding used at the bottom of baseboards and cabinets to cover a small gap or uneven edge between flooring and baseboard. It is used to create a cohesive look in kitchens with hardwood floors. I will walk you. Whether you're a garage woodworker squeezing a project into a tight space or building custom cabinets, we'll build from the ground up so you nail that pro-level fit every time. What Is Seamless Cabinet-to-Baseboard Integration—and Why Does It Matter?

Seamless integration means the cabinets flow. Crown molding is an incredibly prevalent trim type commonly used on interior walls and kitchen cabinets. Each time materials, finish and paint colors are changed, it adds complexity and time to the job which also increases costs.
